

Hearts are Trumps.

In response to some very appropriate invitations, a large number of the friends of Misses Myrtle Dishman and Omaha Johnson gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Keen on the eve of St. Valentine day. The house was tastefully decorated in honor of the day; cupids and hearts being very much in evidence. The color scheme, red and white, was carried out in reception room, parlor and dining room. During the evening the guests tried their skill at piercing hearts, and using Cupid's bow. The young men had the first opportunity of the season to win a lady, but needless to say all received the mittens. In the dining room, a Cupid with drawn bow graced the center of the table. The refreshments carried out the plan of decoration. Valentine favors, baskets of hearts, were distributed among the guests.

None Dead, But Many Wounded

There was a special young men's meeting the other night, at which the chief topic discussed, it is said, was defense and retaliation. After some discussion they decided to abolish all such secret societies held together by such abominable rules as those of the "Hildegards." They have not given out just what their method of procedure will be, but it is a safe bet that they have a scheme which the girls had better match.
